édness in the Brooklyn Handicap, that that portion of the public which looks upon the game from a distance must regard the race track as a veritable nest of iniquity, where horse owners, bookmakers, trainers and jockeys lounge about with keen-edged razors, ready and willing to cut each other's thouse about with keen-edged razors, ready and willing to cut each other's thouse upon the slightest provocation. Nothing could be further from the truth. The turf to-day is freer from scandal than ever before. There are, of course, seme black sheep, but these are to be found in every branch of sport, and even in the business walks of life. It than ever before. There are, of course, some black sheep, but these are to be found in every branch of spert, and even in the business walks of life. It is a mistaken idea to believe that a jockey would rather lose a race than win. It is folly to believe that a book-maker can go into a paddock and bribs a jockey to throw his owner and the public down. It has been done, it is true, but on the big tracks in the East the jockey is well aware that he has everything to gain if he rides honestly, and that he will be quickly blacklisted if he rides a crooked race. In these days of rich stakes and purses the jockey not infrequently receives $500 or $1,000 for a win. Crookedness may be practised to some extent on small tracks in the East and West. The jockeys have no reputations to lose, their work is hard and the pay is small. They might be tempted to throw a race for a few hundred deliars. Such riders as Garreot, Mc aughl n. Fitzpatrick, Hamilton, faral, Doggett, Sims and others draw big salaries from their owners and receive handsome presents from outside wins. Once let the suspicion that they ride crooked races dawn upon owners, and they will be blacklisted just as surely as would a thief be barred from respectable society. It is one of the hardest things in the world to prove that a jockey pulled a horse. There is only the evidence of one's eyes, and that is not enough. After aimost every race one hears comments like this. "So and so never tried a yard." This is equivalent to caling a rider a thief without reason. There are many excuses for a horse's defeat. They are not machines, but yet some misguided individuals will insist that they should run the same clip at every start. Those who are now making indiscriminate charges concerning certain people in the Brooklyn Handicap should digest the above thoroughly.

G. Edwards, who rode Alonzo in the Brookdale Handicap, is unknown to the majority of race-goers. He is one of the English boys brought over with Col. North's stable.
